Our History

1999 – Integra Underground, formally known as Glennies Creek Colliery was established.

2002 – First longwall mining commenced in the Middle Liddell seam.

2014 – The underground operations were placed on care and maintenance at the completion of longwall 12.

2015 – Glencore acquired the assets of the underground from Vale S.A. and its five joint venture partners. The mine remained on care and maintenance.

2016 – Glencore announced plans to re-start mining at Integra Underground, including longwalls 13 and 14.

2017 – Coal mining commenced with the extraction of Longwall 13 and development of Longwall 14. Glencore announces plans to mine an additional longwall – Longwall 15.

Environmental Management

- Our comprehensive Environmental Management System (EMS) provides a framework for the systematic management of environmental issues.
- The EMS covers design, development, production, maintenance and rehabilitation of the operation and its infrastructure.
- The EMS framework provides comprehensive standards, procedures, objectives and targets, to help maintain and continually improve our environmental performance.
- To evaluate the effectiveness of our environmental management process we conduct continuous monitoring of meteorological conditions, air quality, water quality, noise levels, subsidence effects, flora and fauna and rehabilitation areas.

Operation

Glencore and Bloomfield signed binding agreements in August 2015 to acquire 100% of the Integra coal mine complex from Vale S.A. and its five joint venture partners.

Glencore acquired the Integra underground operations, while Bloomfield took ownership of the Integra open cut mine together with the wash plant and rail loop facilities.

Glencore has a commercial agreement to utilise the wash plant and rail loop facilities.

Community

The Integra Underground is committed to ongoing open and honest communication with the local community and other stakeholders. We actively seek to engage and consult the community to provide information relating to the environmental, social and operational performance of the mine and enable the community to provide feedback.

Our community program includes opportunities for not-for-profit community organisations to seek donations, sponsorship and in-kind assistance for a range of environmental, community development and educational activities. We a proud to be a member of our local community.
